Re: Comments on the draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan

Dear Co-leads for the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body:

As a former commercial fisherman, a charter boat owner, a former fishery manager, and fishing community-organizer, I applaud the good work done and the quality of the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan (Plan). Having followed this planning process from inception, it is remarkable to see what the RPB has accomplished in a relatively short timeframe with little precedent to follow. Overall, the Plan offers a solid foundation for marine planning yet to come, and critical guidance for agencies. The potential benefits of the Plan for fishing communities, to thrive in the face of economic and environmental change, cannot be overstated.

With adoption of the Plan it will be essential that participating agencies follow through on and expand upon their commitments, by reprioritizing budgets and dedicating personnel to build upon what this Plan has initiated. What is more, it is imperative that Congress provide additional budgetary support for implementation of this Plan and iterations of Regional Ocean Planning to follow.

Specific Comments on the Plan Provisions on Fisheries

Ocean Data Portal

Having previously served on the New England Fishery Management Council and other NOAA advisory bodies, I have a manager's familiarity with the quality, depth and complexity of data-sets supporting commercial and recreational fisheries in the Greater Atlantic Region. For the first time these data are being made accessible to the public through the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal, in a comprehensible and easy-to-navigate presentation, with analyses. Several innovations are worth noting:

- Until this planning process, vessel monitoring system data (VMS) which is generated within NOAA enforcement branch, was only available to fishery managers through special request. The Regional Ocean Planning process has recognized the extraordinary value of VMS, creating the context for VMS information to be presented in a format which does not compromise its proprietary nature. These powerful data are now available to the fishing public and decision-makers in general.
- Until this planning process the spatial distribution of recreational fishing activities was poorly understood. The Ocean Data Portal has taken the first big steps toward assembling recreational fishing data. Though much remains to be done to adequately characterize the range of recreational fisheries, a foundation has been laid.
- Fishery data suffers from wide variations in quality; this variation is rooted in regulatory complexity and variation in data collection requirements on various fleet segments. This variation in data quality is now well characterized for planners and agencies to take into account.
- Fisheries take place at nested-scales ranging from the purely local in state waters to region-wide with some vessels plying the entire outer continental shelf from Cape Hatteras to Cape Cod. The Ocean Data Portal now greatly informs the work of permitting agencies to perform cumulative-impacts analysis in offshore environments.

2.3 Actions to Promote Healthy Ocean Ecosystems

Comments on Action 1 (page 38) – Identify ecologically rich areas and increase understanding of those areas to foster more informed decision making

There continues to be concerns raised within the fishing community over the Plan's intended identification and treatment of Ecologically Rich Areas (ERA). One part of the concern is that results will somehow circumvent Fishery Management Council/Magnuson Stevens Act process defined by law; an additional aspect reflects concern over lack of definition of science process.

- Defining and developing a pilot ERA and then carrying out a process for evaluating the chosen area is a brilliant idea, worth pursuing, with the following caveats.
- This Section needs to further describe who will participate in this pilot effort, what type of expertise is needed and how will individuals be chosen. Specifically, will NOAA, NMFS and the MAFMC lend expertise and guidance to the effort?
- Habitat management, i.e. the effects of fisheries on marine habitats, is well-described in the Magnuson Stevens Act. In that case, the public process for identifying valuable and vulnerable habitats is developed by teams of scientists and technicians, with results subject to rigorous peer-review. By comparison, development of ERAs may have even greater economic and social consequence; therefore, this Section needs to describe similarly rigorous scientific review to be truly trustworthy for fishermen.

Comments on Action 2 (page 39) – Map shifts in ocean species and habitats:

The process discussed for stakeholder engagement in climate change policy offers great potential as “citizen science”. This should be elevated within the Plan as high priority for action.

There are many instances in the Plan where the fishing community can provide unique and innovative insight, however, nowhere is this more the case than in identification of and tracking climate change. Fishermen are on the water daily, they are acute observers of physical and biological marine conditions, and they are highly dependent on accurately anticipating resource trends. By systematically engaging fishermen’s expertise in mapping climate-driven ocean change, state and federal signatory agencies have the opportunity to create an arena for science-based discussion of the environment which will carry over into other areas of planning over time. This area of endeavor offers the potential for fishermen to lead in data acquisition and to partner effectively with resource scientists, managers and planners. This “bridge-building” should be given high priority.

Climate change effects can be expected to continuously reshape almost all of the data-fields on the Ocean Data Portal. Therefore tracking climate change effects should also be given highest priority, with all agencies and stakeholder groups contributing to that ongoing responsibility. Congress needs to ensure adequate funding.

Comments on Action 5 (page 41) – Develop indicators of the health of the Mid-Atlantic regional ocean ecosystem:

This Action item is closely related to and follows as parallel to Action item 1, i.e., identification of ERAs. As a result it is subject to the same concerns; the indicators chosen will be a reflection of the expertise of those chosen to participate in the process. Therefore the process for selecting indicators should be well-described; the process for identifying expert panelists should be describe; and scientific peer review should be incorporated. The Mid-Atlantic Fishery Management Council and the fishing industry should play a prominent role in discussions.

2.4.2 Ocean Energy

With development of renewable offshore wind energy resources, the outer continental shelf is fast entering a new era unprecedented in history. One of the oldest human industries, fishing, will be called to co-exist with one of the newest, offshore wind. BOEM along with other RPB federal agencies and state agencies have a major role to play in facilitating the communication and institutions which will have to emerge for these two industries to engage constructively for mutual gain.

Comments on Action 3 (page 50) – Partner in on-going studies, identify knowledge gaps, and increase access to research planning cycles related to ocean energy:

The strategies outlined in this Action item are well- conceived and described and, considering the immediacy of offshore wind energy development, should be given high priority by RPB signatories.

Though fishing industry and Fishery Management Council participation is implicit in this section, they should be singled out as key sources of information.

Comments on Action 6 (page 53) – Enhance BOEM engagement of fishing industries through improved data and specific interactions:

This section is superb. BOEM should be applauded for making these Action item commitments.

BOEM might consider one additional action for this section:

- BOEM convene a coast-wide advisory panel of individuals from fisheries in the Greater Atlantic Region, similar in design to NOAA's Marine Fisheries Advisory Committee, to assist in identifying research priorities and opportunities for effective public engagement.

2.4.3 Commercial and Recreational Fishing

Actions 1, 2 and 3 (Pages 55-56) reflect ongoing development of strategies for effective engagement with fishing communities by NOAA, NMFS and the MAFMC. This section is excellent and deserves Congressional support.

2.4.6 Sand Management

Comments on Action 5 (page 65) – Engage fishing communities in planning and environmental review of proposed activities:

As with the previous section on Ocean Energy, BOEM should be applauded for making this Action item commitment. And as was previously commented, BOEM might consider convening and tasking a Marine Fisheries Advisory Committee to assist with research priorities relevant to fisheries.

Recommendation for Future Planning

The Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan is a terrific work-in-progress. The work is only just begun. To illustrate the potential for planning, and spark the interest of ocean users in furthering this planning effort under the next National Administration, the Plan should include a section which identifies policy questions as examples of what might follow from this initial effort. Public hearings have demonstrated that stakeholders are anticipating policy questions; therefore, rather than down-play the difficulty of addressing policy making, the Plan should acknowledge and describe a process to address policy issues which may arise, consistent with standards of transparency, fairness and balanced public engagement.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide these comments on the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan. We look forward to approval of the Final Plan and implementation.

RE: Comments on the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan

Dear Regional Planning Body Co-leads:

The Mariners Advisory Committee for the Bay & River Delaware (MAC) is comprised of master mariners, pilots and other maritime professionals and concerns itself with safety of navigation, with particular regard to large ocean going vessels. This committee works closely with the U.S. Coast Guard, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, commercial operators, and port industry personnel to recommend and promote safe navigation practices on the Delaware Bay and River, as well as the approaches to this very important waterway and as such, the MAC serves as the Harbor Safety Committee (HSC) for the port area.

The MAC has supported the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan from its initial conception. When the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management (BOEM) first proposed the Maryland Wind Energy Area that blocked off access to the primary shipping lane entering the Delaware Bay, it became apparent to our membership that BOEM was not familiar with the area that they were regulating. To help them, as well as other involved governmental agencies and wind developers understand the concerns of the maritime industry (and the maritime industry understand the others' concerns), in April 2011, the MAC formed the Wind Energy Working Group. While the Group only met once, the connections were made. The Coast Guard went on to initiate the Atlantic Coast Port Access Route Study, a ground breaking assessment of vessel traffic along the East Coast. Other attendees frequently cross paths at Regional Planning Body meetings and other related events.

The Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan takes this cooperation to a whole new level. The Plan's Ocean Data Portal provides a means for all agencies concerned with ocean planning to see how their efforts may impact another's as well how they may impact stakeholders' use of the coastal or visit our website www.macdelriv.org

waters. Given that there are 22 separate and sometimes competing agencies involved with ocean use, it is imperative that there is a common portal for ocean use and planning information. The maintenance of accurate maps of maritime traffic and shipping lanes within the portal is critical to ensuring agencies understand when a decision they are making may affect established maritime traffic patterns. For example, when BOEM first began to site a wind energy area off the Delaware Bay as discussed above, it proposed an area that would have cut off a major shipping lane. Our hope is that updated, accurate maritime transit information in the data portal can help prevent problems like this in the future. RPB agencies must commit to updating and maintaining data and information within the portal as well as provide long-term funding for the ocean plan to be effective.

While the Ocean Plan is of great benefit to governmental agencies, it may be that the region's stakeholders are the ones most affected by offshore development. Maritime, commercial fisheries, recreational fisheries and non-consumptive recreational users are on the region's waters daily. Our livelihoods and safety can be adversely impacted by decisions made using the Portal's data. The plan clearly states that: Stakeholder and public engagement has been a cornerstone of the regional ocean planning process and will continue to be a critical component of Plan implementation, and future updates and revisions. I believe that public involvement should go beyond just engagement. Stakeholders should be represented on the Regional Planning Body. Perhaps this could be accomplished by appointing representatives from port harbor safety committees, shipping industry associations, commercial and recreational fisheries associations and other qualified user groups.

Whatever the forum, direct engagement with stakeholders is key to understand how the basic spatial information provided in the portal translates into complex concerns around safety, navigation, and other significant navigational issues. Therefore, RPB agencies must clearly define and hold firm on their commitments within the plan for robust stakeholder engagement, while also utilizing a regional approach to outreach and engagement. While we understand the need for agencies to be flexible in their outreach and engagement with stakeholders, we urge the RPB to take these commitments seriously and outline a plan of action for how agencies will identify affected stakeholders earlier and more effectively within the decision-making process.

Early outreach and coordination with the maritime industry on offshore energy and sand mining project is critical. BOEM specifically has been problematic with early outreach and coordination with other ocean user groups, and has a history of conflicts with the maritime industry, particularly in the mouth of the Delaware Bay where an enormous amount of maritime traffic exists. While BOEM has made commitments to improve engagement in the draft plan, we would like to see clear actions in the appendices for how this will occur. Our hope is that a clearer, more open dialogue will benefit the maritime community by reducing conflicts before they occur, and providing a safer environment for mariners.

The data and information found in the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal should be used as a starting place to identify where affected conflicts may exist. Many ocean users whose industry and livelihoods are affected by proposed offshore developments are operating at regional scales and RPB agencies' stakeholder engagement should represent those interests throughout the region.

We urge the RPB to also create some mechanism to solicit input from stakeholders on management issues, given the unique forum of engagement the RPB provides. This type of input could greatly enhance the performance and monitoring evaluation of the ocean plan during implementation.

With respect to the maritime industry, the Mariners Advisory Committee for the Bay and River Delaware is happy to help facilitate connections with impacted maritime users in our port area and welcome any opportunity to discuss the needs and trends of our industry. Given our unique position, we are well served to be a source of contact when pre-application processes or questions require the need to reach out to potentially affected stakeholders.

The Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan and the Ocean Data Portal are important resources that can have a lasting impact on how we use and protect the ocean. The MAC strongly encourages all agencies involved in ocean planning to make use of this resource and feels that the Ocean Plan is certainly worthy of Congressional and Administrative support.

Respectfully submitted,

Captain Stephen A. Roberts

Dear Mr. LaBelle and Ms. Nicholson:

The American Bird Conservancy (ABC) is writing to comment on the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan. Our comments are also relevant to the Northeast Regional Ocean Action Plan. We realize that comments on the latter plan were due earlier; however, we hope that our general comments can be applied to both plans.

Our primary concern with both plans involves the development of many offshore wind energy projects, which if poorly sited, have the potential to threaten species of marine birds and other federally protected wildlife. ABC was involved as a consultant in the development of the Preliminary Goals Document for Wildlife and Marine Wind Energy Environmental Assessments Offshore of New York State prepared for the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority by the Biodiversity Research Institute (Goodale and Williams 2015). We believe that that document has a number of recommendations that would be useful to BOEM, state regulators and wind energy developers to help avoid conflicts with wildlife.

While offshore wind energy development has potential to produce clean, sustainable energy, it should not ignore the risks it poses to our ecologically important and irreplaceable wildlife (see Maxwell et al. 2016). In addition, ABC believes that whenever energy development decisions are made, the public should be offered an opportunity to assess a range of renewable energy alternatives. Only focusing on large, industrial-scale wind projects, whether on or offshore, does not consider potential, less harmful alternatives, including distributed solar generation on existing structures (e.g. office buildings, homes, parking lots, canals, etc.) that do not harm wildlife or alter pristine habitat.

Most of what we currently know about the effects of offshore wind energy on wildlife comes from Europe (Bailey et al. 2014). Currently, there are few offshore wind energy projects in various stages of development in U.S. states, but the current goal is 54 GW of offshore wind energy produced by 2030

(DOE 2011), which would represent around 9,000 turbines, but this could change rapidly with shifting priorities and other factors.

ABC supports the development of alternative energy as a means of reducing our dependence on fossil fuels and addressing climate change and pollution. However, as a bird conservation organization, we are also concerned about the potential adverse effects of offshore wind energy development on our nation's federally protected and ecologically important native birds.

Onshore wind development is known to present a real, non-trivial threat to birds and bats (Smallwood, 2014, Loss et al. 2014; Erickson 2015). However, there are some important distinctions between onshore and offshore wind energy development and its potential adverse effects on wildlife.

First, because the turbines sit over open water, it will be difficult, if not impossible; to employ existing methods of pre-construction risk assessment and post-construction mortality studies (Baily et al. 2014). Determination of post-construction mortality for birds will be particularly difficult, as carcasses will be immediately lost in water, thus precluding species identification and determination of actual numbers taken. New automated data collection technologies, using high-resolution video, infrared photography and auditory cues (to record turbine blade strikes) may help to meet these needs in the future (e.g., Flowers et al. 2014). However, much more research is needed to test these methods and verify their accuracy. ABC strongly encourages research on new technologies that will allow accurate pre-construction risk assessment and post-construction mortality monitoring at offshore wind facilities.

Second, offshore wind energy development will affect a whole host of different species, including marine seabirds and other marine and freshwater aquatic wildlife, such as cetaceans (whales and dolphins), sea turtles and fish (Bailey et al. 2014). Federally protected Bald Eagles are also likely to experience greater mortality from wind energy development than they have previously, especially when projects are placed closer to our marine coastal habitats. In addition, the recently published North American Bird Conservation Initiative's (2016) State of the Birds report noted that 70% of seabird populations have been lost globally since the 1950s, so we do not have a lot of room for error.

Last, comparatively little is known in the United States about the potential environmental impacts of offshore wind energy as compared to onshore wind energy, which has been in operation and studied for decades longer. Offshore marine environments are highly dynamic and can change rapidly with changing weather conditions, such as strong wind and fog; and changing ocean productivity, salinity and sea surface temperature.

Furthermore, little is currently known about the flight height of various marine avian species, which is considered the most important factor in determining a bird's collision risk (Furness et al. 2013), although avoidance is another important factor (Band 2012). Both are very difficult to measure.

Recent radar studies around the Great Lakes conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

(USFWS) (Bowden et al. 2015, Horton et al 2016) suggest that many migratory birds often fly at lower levels than once thought, and this may be true of other birds as well. For seabirds, which use dynamic soaring, flight height and flight behavior are related to wind speed and direction. Albatross, shearwaters and petrels with more prevalent gliding makes them less maneuverable than flappers, are highly vulnerable to offshore wind, as their flight heights bring them within the blade-swept zone of typical turbines when winds are strong (Ainley et al. 2015).

ABC therefore encourages the USGS, Department of Energy (DOE), Bureau of Ocean Energy Management (BOEM) and other U.S. natural resource agencies to study the species-specific effects of offshore wind energy on federally protected birds and other wildlife and their habitats. It also encourages immediate research on ways to mitigate the effects of offshore wind turbines on birds, including ways to detect and cease wind turbine rotation when large numbers of birds are present, as well as employ appropriate lighting that does not attract birds (May et al. 2015).

ABC is concerned that mitigation methods for birds have not been adequately tested for their efficacy in reducing bird mortality (Baily et al. 2015, Wang et al. 2015). We agree with a recent Department of Energy, Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy statement that, "...technologies to minimize impacts at operational facilities for most species are either in early stages of development or simply do not exist." (DOE EERE 2014). In a recent review, Arnett and May (2016) found that the only proven mitigation methods for bird kill to date are proper siting and curtailment of wind turbine blades.

The collective challenge is to have precaution-based mitigation that seeks to increase the resilience of the populations in the absence of empirical evidence of mortality (Goodale and Stenhouse 2016). As with onshore wind energy development, siting is critical in order to reduce risk of wildlife fatalities (Dewitt and Langston 2006). In the case of birds, abundance (exposure) is one factor, along with vulnerability and hazard, contributing to risk (Marques et al. 2014; Fox et al 2006). It is therefore particularly important that we begin to understand where and why birds are concentrating in certain areas, and avoid those areas whenever possible.

Offshore wind facilities should not be placed in or near marine protected reserves, near populations of rare or endangered species, large breeding colonies, or in major migratory pathways. For seabirds, which regularly transit between island nest sites and open-ocean feeding areas, seasonal closures, buffers or corridors around colony sites should be considered to minimize wind energy impacts. Of course, the definition of "near" may vary from species to species, as some birds travel long distances to forage. In addition, the ocean is a dynamic habitat and conditions (e.g., upwelling, concentration of food species) may change with changing conditions, thus influencing distribution and concentration of wildlife. Recent successful court cases against offshore wind projects in the United States (Cape Wind: Matos 2016) and in Scotland (Neart na Gaoithe and Seagreen Alpha and Bravo: BBC News 2016) emphasize the importance of carefully taking risks to protected wildlife into consideration.

Steps must also be taken to require mitigation and compensation when offshore wind turbines kill public trust resources, including federally protected birds, even after every precaution has been taken.

This may be particularly difficult if accurately estimating bird kill proves impossible in open water situations. If so, we may have to rely on modeling to develop compensation models (e.g., Band 2012).

As with onshore wind energy development, ABC favors mandatory, rather than voluntary permitting guidelines for offshore wind energy that will effectively protect our nation's native birds and other marine wildlife from this rapidly expanding industry. ABC also favors independent assessment of risks preconstruction and monitoring of bird deaths post-construction to remove any potential conflicts of interest. Any pre-construction risk assessment should include consultation with avian experts that are not paid employees of wind energy companies, but who are intimately familiar with the local avifauna and their habitats.

A non-affiliated avian advisory group could help to make informed decisions about the potential impacts of any potential offshore wind energy development. Having such a group plugged into the NEPA process where they can advise on scoping, methods, and data interpretation would provide additional safeguards.

Transparency is also important, as our nation's birds are a public trust resource. The public has a right to know how many and what kinds of birds are being killed at wind energy facilities. However, since most offshore wind projects are occurring under federal jurisdiction, we hope that all monitoring will be public. All post-construction bird and bat fatality data should be collected by independent, third party experts using standardized methods and reported directly to regulatory agencies, as currently occurs only in Hawaii (Hutchins 2016).

A plan for compensating the public for any loss of federally protected species should be worked out before any construction takes place, and should include setting aside additional areas outside the project area for bird conservation purposes. If and when data show that large numbers of birds or other wildlife are taken by a project when it begins operation, especially federally protected species, then the option of total shut down and dismantlement of the turbines must be considered – and that should be made clear at the outset.

ABC recognizes that offshore wind energy, especially when it is positioned long distances off the coast, could offer some advantages over onshore wind energy in terms of its risk to birds, and technological advances are allowing turbines to be installed in deeper water (Bailey et al. 2014). In addition, at least for the distances that they remain underwater, associated electrical cables do not have to be placed on towers, where they can pose a significant risk to birds through collisions and electrocution (Manville 2005, Loss et al 2015). However, once they do reach shore, associated power lines and towers located close to the shoreline could pose additional obstacles to birds that could result in significant mortality, again, depending on siting.

ABC also encourages government regulators to develop a better process for assessing cumulative impact when making wind energy development decisions (see Goodale and Milman 2014, Brabant et al. 2015). Estimating the potential impact of one wind energy facility is very different from assessing the impact of several facilities in the same area (Busch et al. 2013).

ABC supports the development of clean, renewable sources of energy such as wind and solar power to address anthropogenic climate change, but also believes that it must be done responsibly and with minimal impact on our public trust resources, including ecologically important native wildlife, and particularly Threatened, Endangered and other protected species. When it comes to wind energy, proper siting is the most important consideration. ABC is a proponent of Bird Smart Wind Energy, described in some detail on our web site (<https://abcbirds.org/program/wind-energy/bird-smart-strategies/>) and in Hutchins et al. (2016).

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully Yours,

DRAFT MID-ATLANTIC REGIONAL OCEAN ACTION PLAN

August 29, 2016

Robert P. Labelle, Federal Co-Lead
Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body
BOEM, 45600 Woodland Road
Mailstop: VAM-BOEM DIR
Sterling, VA 20166

Dear Mr. Labelle:

The New Jersey Council of Diving Clubs (NJCDC) is an organization of 14 sport diving clubs in New Jersey and other nearby states. There are presently about 29 dive shops and 12 commercial dive boats as well as a number of private dive boats out of various inlets on the NJ coast that service sport divers and the sport diver fishery. The NJCDC would like to submit the following comments on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan with emphasis on a sport diver perspective.

The NJCDC agrees with many of the conservation points made in the draft plan, including

- Keeping the ocean clean
- Mapping shifts in ocean species and habitats.
- Developing indicators of the health of the regional ocean ecosystems.
- Monitoring ocean acidification.
- Developing a regionally appropriate strategy for marine debris reduction, etc.
- Creation and enhancement of the Data Portal so that stakeholders are given better access to ocean information and science.
- A healthy ocean eco-system and sustainable ocean uses provided it is not solely dictated by Federal Agencies and involves full stakeholder participation.

The plan should involve small steps over a period of time, and not try to conquer the ocean in one grand plan.

Regarding actions to foster sustainable ocean use, the NJCDC has issues and concerns regarding Offshore Sand Management. The NJCDC has observed the destruction of fishery habitat in both state and federal waters due to sand replenishment activities. Jetties, groins, near shore wrecks and other hard habitat have been buried by sand replenishment projects, and certain species of fish such as Tautog and Striped Bass depend on these structures for habitat and food. In 1997, the NJCDC reported to the New York District Army Corps of Engineers about the impact on a shipwreck that was hit by a hopper dredge in a borrow area in federal waters, and about diving that borrow area and observing 5-foot-deep continuous furrows on the bottom and no observable marine life in the borrow area. Borrow areas in NJ state waters have recently eliminated important fishing lumps and harmed recreational and commercial fishing. The adverse environmental impacts of sand replenish should be carefully considered before approving any such project.

The statement that recreational diving is listed as a non-consumptive use of the ocean on page 5 is only partially true. Activities such as underwater exploration and u/w photography are non-consumptive. Other activities such as spearfishing, and hand harvest of lobsters and shellfish fall more into the category of recreational fishing, and are definitely a major part of sport diving.

Regarding ocean energy and windmill farms, the NJCDC has no objection to windmill farms provided full access is allowed for fishing and diving within the area of the windmill farm, and provided careful siting is done to avoid important fishing areas such as wrecks, artificial reefs, and fishing lumps that may also be essential fisheries habitat.

Regarding best practices and ocean planning, the NJCDC does not object to the use of ocean planning and the 4 best practices mentioned provided all stakeholders are involved and traditional uses of the ocean are preserved, such as recreational and commercial fishing. Best practices and ocean planning should not become tools for radical environmentalists who are pushing their own agenda, and who often don't even get their feet wet.

The NJCDC has concerns about the Administration's designation of large areas of ocean as National Monuments (marine preserves) that restrict commercial and recreational fishing without going through a process to involve fishermen, regional fishery councils, and all stakeholders and give them a say in any decisions. This contradicts the policy of stakeholder involvement in the plan implementation of the Mid Atlantic Regional Action Plan and the National Ocean Policy that called for inclusive engagement of partners, the public, and stakeholders, including those most impacted. If the Antiquities Act needs to be changed to bring more stakeholder involvement and public input, then let the law be changed. The NJCDC also has concerns about taking any action that would involve federal waters in the Mid-Atlantic based solely on an executive order without involving our legal congressional legislative representatives. As mentioned in the introduction to the Ocean Action Plan, Executive Order 13547 does not have regulatory authority.

Respectfully

Jack Fullmer

RE: Comments on the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan

Dear Regional Planning Body Co-leads:

As a recreational angler and avid duck hunter off Long Island's shore, I appreciate the opportunity to provide comments to the draft Ocean Action Plan. I not only am an avid recreational angler myself, but I also manage a recreational fishing forum, Noreast. We currently have approximately 71,000 registered members, who are eager to have a better understanding of the various ocean uses, and a voice at the table when it comes to managing our ocean resources. I applaud the Regional Planning Body's (RPB) efforts to engage stakeholders within the region and appreciate that recreational fishing is represented as a significant ocean user group within the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan. That being said, there are three specific areas I would like to provide comment on:

1. Recreational Fishing Data Within the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal

I find it interesting that the Northeast Data Portal has more detailed recreational fishing information than the Mid-Atlantic Data Portal. I see that it is due to a study which was funded in the Northeast region to better understand where and how folks are recreationally fishing. There is much less data available in the Mid-Atlantic Data Portal, which is discouraging to see since there is a ton of information currently available on recreational fishing and recreational boating areas, from AIS tracking information. New regulations are requiring some charter and party boats to use AIS and many private recreational boats are doing so voluntarily. I follow many boats on this website (www.marinetraffic.com) and would like to see more of this real time data incorporated into the portal. The RPB should work to improve and update relevant recreational fishing data during plan implementation and prioritize a mechanism to ensure peer-reviewed research and real time data can be added to the portal.

I have been told by the Coast Guard that the AIS information is being used, but that it's lagging behind. They are currently using 2013/14 data, which is troubling since the use of AIS by recreational vessels has grown exponentially since that time, and I'm sure the data will just get more and more accurate as time goes on. I encourage the RPB to begin to review this information more regularly.

I hope the RPB will also work with relevant agencies to make sure the data portal is funded and kept current. The RPB should also develop a regional research and science agenda, including recreational fishing as a priority data gap to be filled.

2. The USFW service should be included as one of the agencies on the RPB

As a waterfowl hunter, I am very concerned about the future development of wind energy areas, and the impact they may have on migrating ducks (including sea-ducks, divers, and dabbling ducks). New York State waterfowl biologists have maps developed by Gulf of Maine Research Institute (GMRI), showing that many sea-ducks are using the areas off of Block Island for their migration routes. Areas south of Long Island are a transit area for many more species of waterfowl. The Bureau of Ocean Energy Management has indicated that sea birds are not of a great concern for being killed by wind turbine blades because it's believed that they typically are flying low to the water and out of the way of the spinning rotors. However, from my personal observations, there are many gulls, terns, shearwaters, and especially gannets and loons that use the proposed areas off of Block Island in the late fall and winter, which fly at altitudes that very well may contact spinning rotors of windmills. Gannets form tight flocks in the fall when they feed on herring schools, and dive into the water from high up. I also frequently observe loons feeding and congregating in areas offshore in the winter time, more than 10 miles out, in depths of over 100' and they fly at higher altitudes. Therefore, it's my opinion, that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service should have a more involved role in the ocean planning process, especially as we enter into the plan implementation phase.

3. RPB agencies should commit to improve engagement with recreational anglers

My hope is that the RPB will make strong commitments to continue to improve stakeholder engagement, specifically with recreational anglers, when it comes to management of our ocean and as it works to improve the data portal for future iterations of the plan.

Specifically, a mechanism that allows stakeholders to provide input on the plan during implementation and ask the RPB to address management issues would also be useful. This could be part of the plans' performance monitoring and evaluation.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan. I look forward to continuing to engage in the process, and am always happy to serve as a point of reference for recreational anglers and waterfowl hunters.

Sincerely,

Christopher Spies

RE: Comments from the Virginia Marine Trades Association on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan

Dear Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body:

The Virginia Marine Trades Association (VMTA) is a non-profit trade association organized to promote and support Virginia's recreational marine industry. Our nearly 100 members are comprised of dealerships, boatyards, marinas, boating service providers, marine technicians, and others. Together, we are committed to the development of the marine industry and the strength of each member business. VMTA does this by representing members before elected officials and state agencies, and as part of our efforts we are constantly seeking commonsense solutions that will both promote healthy ocean waters and protect the access our members rely on. We believe the draft Ocean Action Plan is a strong first step at fostering collaboration among diverse ocean sectors, including the marine trades, and we see strong potential for our members to benefit from this collaboration.

As a membership organization, we value inclusive decision-making. The bottom-up approach the Mid-Atlantic RPB has developed is encouraging, particularly the strong focus of the draft Plan on stakeholder engagement. We are aware of the active outreach to ocean users that was done throughout the early stages of the planning process, particularly in developing datasets for the Portal. This outreach enabled members of the boating public and others them to contribute their expertise and experience to help decisionmakers understand how and where they are currently using the region's ocean waters. We urge the RPB to continue to proactively seek out information from the organizations that represent the ocean users in our region. We are happy to provide additional information on the current and future needs of the marine trades industry, the potential conflicts our members are encountering on the water, and review data and documentation the RPB produces in the future. We are also willing to be a resource for agencies to reach individuals in the marine trades or boating industries in Virginia, as our association has deep roots in the state. We would further urge the RPB to ensure agencies who have made commitments to stakeholder engagement, especially enhancing the engagement of our sector, are held to those commitments.

One of the ways we have seen the region proactively engage the marine trades during the planning process was through the inclusion of recreational boating maps and economic data in the ocean plan. In the past, information documenting the extent of recreational boating in the region has been limited, thus limiting our voice in decision-making processes. We are happy to see the RPB engage in efforts to characterize when, where, and how boaters use the ocean through the Mid-Atlantic Recreational Boating Survey. The maps showing boating routes' relative density over time are a great first step, however we urge the RPB to continue additional recreational boating studies in the future to maintain and expand upon these early datasets. For our members to fully realize the benefits of ocean planning, the plan's spatial and economic data must accurately reflect boating usage in the region, and boaters must see their data and information reflected in the ocean plan.

While we appreciate the efforts outlined above on data collection and management, to better understand the recreational boating community and related marine trades, we ask that the RPB develop a plan and funding to ensure these information sources remain updated and reliable over the long-term. By ensuring there is adequate funding available to maintain and improve the maps and information in the Plan, our industry and all the other ocean users in the region can continue to benefit from the process we have started with this draft.

We appreciate the opportunity to highlight the importance of ensuring outreach to the marine trades when projects are proposed offshore, maintaining, refreshing and enhancing relevant data sets, and committing to finding long-term funding solutions for the Portal. These commitments will ensure better access for boaters, while reducing conflicts with other users. We would like to see the RPB formally evaluate its success at meeting these commitments over the next several years as the plan is implemented.

Thank you again for the opportunity to provide our comments on the plan, and the VMTA looks forward to working with the RPB and all its member agencies to ensure the successful implementation of the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan.

Sincerely,

RE: Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan Comments

Sent via mail to: MidAtlanticRPB@boem.gov

Dear Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body:

We write to provide comments and express our concerns regarding the limited geographic scope of the proposed Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan, and we request and recommend up front that the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan should extend landward to the mean high-water line.

In order to better meet our Nation's stewardship responsibilities for the ocean, our coasts, and the Great Lakes, President Obama established the Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force (Task Force) on June 12, 2009. The Task Force was composed of 24 senior-level officials from executive departments, agencies, and offices across the Federal government and led by the Chair of the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ). The President charged the Task Force with developing recommendations to enhance our ability to maintain healthy, resilient, and sustainable ocean, coasts, and Great Lakes resources for the benefit of present and future generations.

The Task Force published its "Final Recommendations Of The Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force" on July 19, 2010. The Task Force recommended 9 National Priority Objectives, including the following National Priority Objective on page 6:

2. Coastal and Marine Spatial Planning: Implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management in the United States.

In "PART FOUR. THE FRAMEWORK FOR EFFECTIVE COASTAL AND MARINE SPATIAL PLANNING" (page 41), the Task Force makes specific recommendations for geographic scope of coastal and marine spatial planning in section IX on page 49 as follows:

IX . Geographic Scope of Coastal and Marine Spatial Planning

The geographic scope of the planning area for CMSP in the United States includes the territorial sea, the EEZ, and the Continental Shelf. The geographic scope of the planning area would extend landward to the mean high-water line. The geographic scope for the Great Lakes would extend from the ordinary high-water mark and include the lakebed, subsoil, and water column to the limit of the United States and Canada international boundary, as maintained by the International Boundary Commission, and includes Lake St. Clair and the connecting channels between lakes. Privately owned lands as defined by law would be excluded from the geographic scope.

The geographic scope would include inland bays and estuaries in both coastal and Great Lakes settings. Inclusion of inland bays and estuaries is essential because of the significant ecological, social, and economic linkages between these areas with offshore areas. Additional inland areas may be included in the planning area as the regional planning bodies, described in Section X of this Part, deem appropriate. Regardless, consideration of inland activities would be necessary to account for the significant interaction between upstream activities and ocean, coastal, and Great Lakes uses and ecosystem health. Likewise, consideration would also be given to activities occurring beyond the EEZ and continental shelf that may influence resources or activities within the planning area.

In stark contrast to the geographic scope of coastal and marine spatial planning as recommended by the Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force in 2009, the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body is proposing to limit its geographic focus from the shoreline seaward to 200 nautical miles as follows:

1.4.2 GEOGRAPHIC FOCUS page 22

The primary geographic focus for Mid-Atlantic regional ocean planning is the ocean waters of the region. Specifically, the geographic focus includes:

- The shoreline seaward to 200 nautical miles, to the boundary of the Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ), which includes Federal, State, and Tribal waters.²³
- The northern limit is the New York/Connecticut and New York/Rhode Island border
- The southern limit is the Virginia/North Carolina border.

While the RPB operates with this definition, it recognizes the importance of bays, estuaries, and coastal areas. The RPB will draw connections to and coordinate closely with entities responsible for the management and planning of those areas, particularly when ocean uses and natural resources have an interrelationship with coastal communities, bays, estuaries, ports, or other shoreside infrastructure. The geographic focus is an administrative description for planning purposes only, and is not intended to create or represent fixed boundaries or affect existing legal authorities.

While the proposed geographic focus as stated above makes secondary reference to coastal communities, bays, estuaries, ports or other shoreside infrastructure, the decision to not include those areas in the primary focus of the plan means that this Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan does not meet the National Priority Objective to Implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management in the United States.

Back to the “Final Recommendations Of The Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force” on July 19, 2010, the Task Force also recommended the establishment of a Policy Coordination Framework that created a National Ocean Council (NOC) that would have overall responsibility for the implementation of the National Ocean Policy, including coastal and marine spatial planning, and regional planning oversight.

In July 2013, the NOC also published “The Marine Planning Handbook” to provide information to regions about developing regional planning bodies and marine plans, supplementing the information in the Implementation Plan.

In our opinion, “The Marine Planning Handbook” has essentially disconnected some of the original National Priority Objectives and the originally recommended geographic scope of coastal and marine spatial planning from the regional planning process. For example, the following sentence on page 1 of The Marine Planning Handbook delegates the scope, scale and content of marine plans solely to the discretion of the regions:

The scope, scale, and content of marine plans are defined by the regions themselves, to solve problems that regions care about in ways that reflect their unique interests, capacity to participate, and ways of doing business.

So rather than to implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management in the Mid-Atlantic Region, the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan is a scaled back effort mostly to “solve problems” from the shoreline seaward and fails to recognize that the inclusion of inland bays and estuaries is essential because of the significant ecological, social, and economic linkages between these areas with offshore areas.

We offer the following examples where the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan excludes or omits important federally designated inshore resources and regulatory and management contexts to support our recommendation that the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan should extend landward to the mean high-water line:

1. Essential Fish Habitat (Maps 1 & 2, pages 6 & 7)

Essential Fish Habitat (EFH), as established for fish species managed under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, extends significantly inshore from the shoreline, including in bays, coastal estuaries, and tidal tributaries. This inshore EFH in state waters is extremely valuable for fish eggs, larvae, and juvenile life stages of managed fish species. This is where many of the fish out in the ocean come from. This inshore EFH should be included in the identification of ecologically rich areas, but it appears that it will be excluded where the primary focus of the plan is from the shoreline out. We note that the MAFMC is concerned about the protection and management of EFH in inshore waters from the following MAFMC policy statement <http://www.mafmc.org/habitat/> :

The Mid-Atlantic Fishery Management Council is responsible for the management of marine fisheries in the Exclusive Economic Zone. The Council develops management plans and management measures for fourteen species of fish and shellfish. Most of the Council’s managed resources have strong nearshore and coastal linkages to habitat, and in many cases the nearshore and offshore environment for these managed resources is a continuum.

Fish stocks cannot be managed sustainably in the absence of a healthy marine ecosystem, and healthy fish habitat, which starts inland with freshwater stream and river inputs, and continues offshore to the outer continental shelf of the US Atlantic. Anthropogenic activities and projects within the Greater Atlantic region (i.e. Northeast region, including the Mid-Atlantic and New England waters) have the potential to impact the productivity of the Council’s managed fishery resources, other federally-managed fish resources, state-managed fish resources, and the forage on which these fish rely. In addition, many of these activities have the potential to impact species protected under the Endangered Species Act and Marine Mammal Protection Act, such as marine mammals and sea turtles.

In order to implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management for EFH in the Mid-Atlantic Region, we recommend that the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body and the National Ocean Council expand the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan to extend landward to the mean high-water line.

2. Federally designated coastal Wild and Scenic Rivers (Maps 3 & 4, pages 8 & 9)

The Great Egg Harbor National Scenic and Recreational River, and the Maurice National Scenic and Recreational River, are two coastal rivers in New Jersey that are federally designated as part of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers system, and they have been excluded from the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan. Both these rivers have tidal estuaries and tidal tributaries which support federally designated EFH, both these rivers have Comprehensive Management Plans that are implemented in partnership with the National Park Service, both these rivers support anadromous fish that migrate back and forth from offshore to inshore, and both these rivers have federal development restrictions under Section 7 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

In order to implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management for federally designated Wild and Scenic Rivers in the Mid-Atlantic Region, we recommend that the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body and the National Ocean Council expand the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan to extend landward to the mean high-water line and include Wild and Scenic Rivers in the Ocean Action Plan and include the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act in the Regulatory and Management Context of the plan.

3. National Estuary Program Areas (Maps 5 & 6, pages 10 & 11)

In 1987, the U.S. Congress amended the Clean Water Act and produced a far-sighted piece of public policy. Section 320 of the 1987 Clean Water Act (CWA) created the National Estuary Program (NEP) to identify, protect and restore "estuaries of national significance." Section 320 was subsequently updated in the Estuaries and Clean Waters Act of 2000.

New Jersey currently has 3 estuaries of national significance, New York-New Jersey Harbor, Barnegate Bay, and Delaware Bay, which are not included in the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan. All these estuaries support EFH, host locally-based, stakeholder-driven programs that are non-regulatory and collaborative, and offer an effective method of protecting and managing all types of watershed environments based on a track record spanning more than two decades.

In order to implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management for federally designated National Estuary Programs in the Mid-Atlantic Region, we recommend that the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body and the National Ocean Council expand the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan to extend landward to the mean high-water line and include National Estuary Program Areas in the Ocean Action Plan, and include Section 320 of the Clean Water Act in the Regulatory and Management Context of the plan.

4. Inshore Shellfish Waters (Map 7, page 12)

Section 2.4.4 of the proposed Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan addresses Ocean Aquaculture, which includes shellfish. This section states that Mid-Atlantic ocean aquaculture currently occurs only in nearshore waters maintained by the states. Actions 1 and 2 of the plan call for increased aquaculture planning in both state and federal waters, but there are no Action Plans to manage and protect inshore shellfish waters.

Inshore shellfish waters have high economic value and require clean water and other protections, and the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan should include these waters in the plan. One way to facilitate that would be to include inshore waters in the primary geographic focus of the plan.

5. Water Quality (Map 8, page 13)

There are no actions in the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan to plan for and protect water quality. The Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body appears to be delegating water quality planning and compliance solely to the states.

We recommend that to implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based coastal and marine spatial planning and management to protect the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean, that planning actions to protect water quality both inshore and offshore should be included in the plan.

For example, Map 8 on page 0 shows 62 permitted treated waste water discharge points in New Jersey below the head of tide, many of which are in tidal rivers and bays. Assuming that all the other states in the Mid-Atlantic Region have similar discharge points, who is monitoring the cumulative impact of all these discharges to ocean water quality?

The U.S. Geological Survey has done extensive tracking of the source and quantity of nutrients to the Nation's Estuaries <http://water.usgs.gov/nawqa/sparrow/estuary/> , http://water.usgs.gov/nawqa/sparrow/estuary/n_atlantic/ , and we recommend that the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body should include plans to address the cumulative impacts of all those nutrients into the ocean.

6. Primary and Secondary Inshore Impacts to Offshore Development

The development of offshore oil and gas drilling, offshore wind, offshore LNG, and other offshore industrial development will have direct and indirect impacts on inshore areas.

Making the primary focus of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan from the shoreline seaward disconnects planning for the impacts of offshore development on inshore areas.

Rather than “drawing connections” to estuaries, bays, and coastal areas in reactions to shoreline out planning, the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body should proactively recognize that any ocean uses and all natural resources have an interrelationship with coastal communities, bays, estuaries, ports, or other shoreside infrastructure.

Final Comment

The Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body should recognize that the inclusion of inland bays and estuaries is essential to comprehensive ocean planning because of the significant ecological, social, and economic linkages between these areas with offshore areas, and should therefore expand the geographic scope of the planning area of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan to extend landward to the mean high-water line.

Respectfully,

Fred Akers, Administrator

Map 1: Mid-Atlantic Essential Fish Habitat in New Jersey

Map 2: The Geographic Focus of the Draft Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan, 1.4.2, from “the shoreline seaward to 200 nautical miles”, disconnects inshore EFH from the planning and does not meet the original intent of Coastal and Marine Planning in the United States.

According to the Final Recommendations of the Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force, Coastal and Marine Planning should “Implement comprehensive, integrated, ecosystem based costal and marine spatial planning and management” (pg. 3), and, “The geographic scope of the planning area would extend landward to the mean high-water line” (pg. 41).

Map 3: Planning only from the shoreline out to 200 miles eliminates implementation of comprehensive ocean planning for the Coastal National Wild and Scenic Rivers that connect to the ocean. Reference to these National Wild and Scenic Rivers and the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act should be included in the Regulatory and Management Context of the Plan. (Appendix 3)

Map 4: EFH is in these Wild and Scenic Rivers, and Marine Ecosystem Values were some of the Outstanding Resource Values for which these rivers were designated by Congress under the Wild & Scenic Rivers Act.

Map 5: Planning only from the shoreline out to 200 miles eliminates implementation of comprehensive ocean planning for the Environmental Protection Agency's National Estuary Program Areas. Also, reference to the National Estuary Program should be included in the Regulatory and Management Context of the Plan. (Appendix 3)

Map 7: Inshore shellfish waters will not be part of the Mid-Atlantic Region Ocean Action Plan where they occur inshore of the NJ Shoreline.

Thank you for submitting comments on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan; we will post them on our website. The MidA RPB will consider all public comments in revising the Draft Plan, and will submit a final Plan to the National Ocean Council for its concurrence this fall. Please check our website <http://www.boem.gov/Ocean-Action-Plan/> for additional information.

Re: Recommendations on the draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan

Dear Mr. LaBelle,

On behalf of our organizations and their millions of members and activists, we congratulate you and the other Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body (MidA RPB or RPB) members on developing the region's first-ever action plan to inform and guide ocean protection and sustainable development. Many of us have engaged in this planning process since its inception and we appreciate the years of work you and your federal, state, tribal and fishery management colleagues invested to produce this draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan (Plan) and the underlying new, proactive and integrated way of governing our ocean's wealth that the Plan represents. We firmly support the Plan's twin goals to promote healthy ocean ecosystems and provide for sustainable ocean use;¹ its foundation in the holistic concept of ecosystem-based management;² efforts to embrace stakeholders and the public as "a cornerstone of the ... planning process";³ and the endeavors on behalf of your agencies to use the best available science and data in planning.⁴

Overwhelming support exists for improved ocean coordination, planning and protection. As noted in the Plan, "The Mid-Atlantic region is likely to experience significant changes over the coming years as our use of ocean space and resources increases and the effects of climate change impact the region's marine waters."⁵ Mid-Atlantic residents share concerns that our ocean is becoming increasingly busy and that its valuable marine life is vulnerable. Polling further reveals Mid-Atlantic residents want a final action plan that identifies areas offshore important for the health of marine life (96%); commits agencies to conserve these ocean areas (93%); and sets objectives for ocean health and indicators to regularly measure progress in meeting those objectives (90%).⁶

While the draft Plan is an admirable start, additional detail is essential for critical conservation actions and to flesh out the role of stakeholders and the public in Plan implementation. We urge you to adopt the below recommendations to strengthen the final Plan and help secure the promise of the National Ocean Policy: “To achieve an America whose stewardship ensures that the ocean ... [is] healthy and resilient, safe and productive, and understood and treasured so as to promote the well-being, prosperity, and security of present and future generations.”⁷

I. The Plan must commit to identify our ocean’s ecologically rich areas and to conserve these areas.

A. Ecologically rich areas

Ecologically rich areas and region-wide ecological features (ERAs) are special ocean places containing habitat and wildlife critical to ecosystem functioning and resilience. Knowing the location of these areas will allow ocean resource managers, businesses and stakeholders to make better decisions about how to use and conserve our ocean. It is impossible to achieve the Plan’s goal to “promote ocean ecosystem health, functionality, and integrity through conservation, protection, enhancement and restoration”⁸ without identifying ERAs; areas critical to ecological functioning should be mapped and responsible measures designed to ensure their protection. The Final Recommendations of the Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force (Final Recommendations) – incorporated by reference into the establishing Executive Order 13547 – calls for this work to “investigate, assess, forecast, and analyze ... The ecological condition and relative ecological importance or values of areas within the planning area, including identification of areas of particular ecological importance.”⁹

ERAs for all five components of ecological importance¹⁰ can and must be identified, mapped and included on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal (Portal) by the end of 2016. This deadline is achievable: several scientific and stakeholder forums have been held in the Mid-Atlantic and by the Northeast Regional Planning Body’s Ecosystem-Based Management Working Group¹¹ to clarify what makes an area

⁶ Please see Attachment A for a summary of poll methodology and findings.

⁸ Plan at 24.

⁹ Final Recommendations of the Interagency Ocean Policy Task Force (Final Recommendations) at 57, available at http://www.whitehouse.gov/files/documents/OPTF_FinalRecs.pdf.

¹¹ Information on the Ecosystem-Based Management Working Group is available at <http://neoceanplanning.org/about/northeast-RPB/>.

ecologically important, and extensive work has been conducted to collect, model and refine the necessary marine life and habitat data to develop these synthetic layers of importance.

The Plan should also commit to generate a composite map of ERAs (synthesizing all five components) and post it on the Portal with any associated information in 2017. The Plan should commit to update the ERA data, as needed, and to create an open, transparent and science-based process with clear timelines for this work, including detailing how the science community, stakeholders and the public will be involved in review of the ERA layers, so that all understand when and how to engage in the process.

The natural resources base layers collected and developed by this planning process are available on the Portal and are essential, but, as noted in the Plan, “Because base layers total in the thousands, efforts to develop a general understanding of the overall richness or diversity in a particular area are not well served by the base products.”¹² Summary or “synthetic” layers integrate relevant data strands, and ERA components and composite maps will provide ocean managers and interested parties with a shared starting point for discussions. Our world is not static; periodic updates of ERA data – as well as other stakeholder use synthetic data layers – will be needed as our understanding and use of the ocean ecosystem evolves, but offshore decisions are made daily and ERA synthetic products offer us a valuable tool now to inform proposed actions.

This does not mean that the Plan can take a pass on improving ocean health in areas not identified as ERAs; rather, it means that in the absence of efforts to pinpoint areas of major ocean biodiversity and rarity – places that shape the fabric of our region’s ocean ecosystem – we make it harder for ocean managers to know where to focus further conservation attention. Absence of this information also reduces the ability of businesses and stakeholders to address potential siting conflicts early on.

To accomplish these goals, we strongly recommend the following edits [new text in bold throughout the document] to Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1:

- “Identify ecologically rich areas of the Mid-Atlantic ocean and increase understanding of those areas to foster more informed decision making and promote a healthy ocean.”¹³
- Update Action 1, Step A to “~~Define, evaluate, and~~ Continue to refine the marine life data synthesis approach. ~~This includes developing a general framework for identification of ecologically rich areas (ERAs) that contains terms, references, and general components of ERAs. This approach will identify data to satisfy ERA component requirements, as well as thresholds for application of these data to define ERAs.~~ Identify and post initial data synthesis layers for each of the Framework for Identification of Ecologically Rich Areas components on the Portal by the end of 2016. Update data layers and provide a composite map of ecologically rich areas synthesizing all five components and post associated maps and other information on the Portal by the end of 2017 and periodically as new information becomes available. These steps will be undertaken in coordination with Mid-Atlantic scientific experts, Traditional Knowledge holders, stakeholders, the public, and the Northeast Regional Planning Body (NE RPB). ~~A draft~~

¹² Plan at 82.

¹³ Plan at 38.

The framework for identification of ERAs can be found in Appendix 4. (short-term and underway).”¹⁴

B. Agency commitments to conserve ERAs

The Plan must also include agency commitments to ensure that ocean management decisions conserve the ecosystem values and functions that ERAs contain. Executive Order 13547 states “the policy of the United States [is] to ... protect, maintain, and restore the health and biological diversity of ocean ... ecosystems and resources.”¹⁵ The Final Recommendations note:

[Regional ocean planning] is intended to improve ecosystem health and services by planning human uses in concert with the conservation of important ecological areas, such as areas of high productivity and biological diversity; areas and key species that are critical to ecosystem function and resiliency; areas of spawning, breeding, and feeding; areas of rare or functionally vulnerable marine resources; and migratory corridors ... [Regional ocean planning] allows for a comprehensive look at multiple sector demands which would provide a more complete evaluation of cumulative effects. *This ultimately is intended to result in protection of areas that are essential for the resiliency and maintenance of healthy ecosystem services and biological diversity, and to maximize the ability of marine resources to continue to support a wide variety of human uses.*¹⁶

Agencies should identify management measures they can take under their existing authorities to improve ocean health and protect ERAs from uses that would undermine their value. There is extensive documentation of various resource/ use conflicts within existing scientific literature which can inform agencies as to what stressors could be mitigated in order to ensure a healthy ecosystem. Developing a compatibility assessment in 2017 that spells out where, when and how natural and human activities can safely occur together and delineates the various management approaches to mitigate for impacts would help advance the Plan’s goals to secure a healthy ocean and sustainable use. We recommend adding a step between Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1 Steps A and B to: “Develop a compatibility assessment that shows the potential impacts of human uses on marine life and habitats and develops a list of best management practices that agencies can use, under their existing authorities, to mitigate for such impacts. (short-term).” This assessment should advise ocean management overall, as well as be used to help identify actions to conserve ERAs.

The Plan should clarify that taking steps to protect ERAs to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law does not mean they are closed off to human use – human activities may occur so long as the ecological value of the area is conserved. Similarly, the particular measures by which ERAs could receive protections depends on whether or not human uses occur or could occur in an ERA that would adversely impact its functioning. Such an approach acknowledges the interdependency of a healthy ocean and regional coastal communities and economies which depend on its well-being.

¹⁵ Executive Order 13547 at Section 2.

¹⁶ Final Recommendations at 44. Emphasis added.

C. Pilots

We support the RPB's selection of an ERA pilot area (Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1, Step B)¹⁷ to explore a specific area's compatibilities with the various human uses occurring or proposed for the area and to identify specific actions that could be taken to help conserve the functioning of that ERA. We recommend establishing, with input from the public, science, stakeholder, and Traditional Knowledge communities, criteria to guide the RPB's pilot project selection. Criteria should be set in early 2017 to avoid a time lapse between ERA identification and the selection of pilot areas. We suggest selecting at least two initial pilot areas to explore – one ERA best representing an area of regional scope (i.e., the Mid-Atlantic's continental shelf and offshore submarine canyons) and another ERA experiencing significant development pressure where protective efforts could help sustain the ERA's natural balance. Pilot areas should be identified and assessments developed (using, as one piece, the compatibility assessment referenced above) by the end of 2017, with draft reports anticipated in mid-2018. We recommend revising Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1, Step B: "Identify criteria in early 2017 to select from a full suite of potential ERAs, ~~for consideration and develop criteria for choosing a~~ at least one pilot area for more in-depth assessment, in collaboration with stakeholders, Traditional Knowledge holders, and scientists. ~~Identify and recommend to the RPB at least one pilot ERA for more in-depth assessment.~~ (short-term)."¹⁸

D. Portal

To ensure that all of the work "lives" on the Portal so that it can advise decision-making beyond members of the federal family, we recommend adding to Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1 a new step that mirrors the language found in Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 2, Step F:¹⁹ "Facilitate the publication of maps and reports on the Data Portal, after they have been vetted and finalized. (short-term)."

Our organizations consider the abovementioned work fundamental to the Plan's success in achieving a healthier ocean and urge you to prioritize it. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration should be named as a lead federal agency to assist Virginia in coordinating agency efforts to achieve Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 1 (as well as Action 5, mentioned below).

II. The Plan must clarify and enhance agency commitments to improve ocean health and use the Plan in decision-making.

The final Plan and its accompanying Federal Register²⁰ notice should commit agencies to implement the Plan's provisions to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law. As noted in Section 6a of Executive Order 13547:

¹⁷ Plan at 38.

¹⁸ Plan at 38.

¹⁹ Plan at 39.

All executive departments, agencies, and offices that are members of the [National Ocean] Council and any other executive department, agency, or office whose actions affect the ocean, our coasts, and the Great Lakes shall, to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law ... (ii) participate in the process for ... [regional ocean] planning and comply with Council certified ... [regional ocean] plans, as described in the Final Recommendations and subsequent guidance from the Council.²¹

The Plan should include improving ocean health as a best management practice to ensure that the Plan's goals and that of the National Ocean Policy, as noted above, are met.

To address these concerns we recommend revising the Federal Register notice to read:

If the [National Ocean Council or] NOC concurs (i.e., certifies) that the Plan is consistent with Executive Order 13547, the Final Recommendations, and the Handbook, each Federal MidA RPB member will immediately begin to incorporate the final Plan into their planning processes and internal agency documents, and use the Plan to guide and inform their decisions and actions, to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law. Federal MidA RPB members with regulatory responsibilities will incorporate the final Plan into their pre-planning, planning, and permitting to guide and inform Federal agency internal and external permitting decisions, environmental compliance, resource management plans, and other actions taken pursuant to existing statutory and regulatory authorities. These agencies will ensure their scientists, managers, decision-makers, and analysts use the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan, the identified ecologically rich areas, and the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal to guide and inform their actions to the fullest extent ~~possible~~ consistent with applicable law under existing statutory and regulatory authorities.²²

We recommend changes to the Plan to reinforce the Federal Register and ensure management decisions are consistent with the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Planning Framework's Healthy Ocean Ecosystem goal:²³

- "Marine planning is intended to guide and align Federal and State agency legal authority and decision making, and agencies will adhere to the plan and/or other products to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law ~~extent possible, consistent with their existing authorities.~~"²⁴

²¹ Executive Order 13547. Emphasis added.

²² Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan, Notice with Request for Comments, 81 Fed. Reg. 44040 (July 6, 2016). Also, as stated in the Final Recommendations, "Signatories and all NOC member agencies would adhere to a NOC-certified ... Plan, within the limits of their existing statutory and regulatory authorities" (at 65). States that sign the NOC-concurred with Plan commit to using it to guide their decision-making. As such, the following Plan language should be removed to avoid confusion: "All RPB entities are strongly encouraged to use best practices, but they are voluntary for States and Tribes." (Plan at 27).

²³ Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Planning Framework (Framework) at 6, available at <http://www.boem.gov/Mid-Atlantic-Regional-Ocean-Planning-Framework/>. Please note that should the Plan's Executive Summary be considered part of the final Plan, we recommend substituting its current "purpose of the RPB" language (at 2) with the publicly vetted and approved Framework vision and goals, and that the Executive Summary's best practices match the recommendations listed here.

²⁴ Plan at 15.

- “Best practices are flexible but consistent guidance for the acquisition and use of data and information in intergovernmental coordination and decision making. Best practices are implemented through, and enhance the value of existing coordination mechanisms by supporting: ... • Acknowledgement that healthy ecosystems are essential to human welfare and that their functionality must be accounted for.”²⁵
- “Over the course of agency coordination, participating agencies and Tribes should: • Provide measures to avoid and minimize adverse impacts to natural resources, including, but not limited to, ecologically rich areas, and encourage sustainable uses, in accordance with existing authorities to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law.”²⁶
- “RPB members ~~should~~ will use, to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law, the Data Portal to inform: • The environmental and regulatory review processes under applicable statutes and regulations. • Other management activities, including restoration, research, conservation, and other activities.”²⁷

We further recommend editing Ocean Energy Action 2 and having it apply to all agencies in the Plan’s Section 2.1.1 regarding data use and agency coordination: “All RPB agencies will develop internal Bureau of Ocean Energy Management guidance on integrating the Plan-developed best practices for using the Data Portal in management, environmental, and regulatory reviews. ... A. Using best practices described in section 2.1 and Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Actions 1 and 6, BOEM RPB agencies will increase use of the Data Portal in management, environmental, and regulatory reviews.”²⁸ Ocean Energy Action 4, Step B²⁹ should also serve as a best practice for all RPB agencies and move into Section 2.1.3 regarding enhanced stakeholder coordination.

III. The Plan should commit agencies to identify ocean health indicators and objectives.

The Plan should commit agencies to track and regularly report on indicators of the Mid-Atlantic’s ocean health in a central location on the Portal and to set SMART objectives (specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-limited)³⁰ based on these indicators so that we can monitor our marine health and use this information to advise future actions. We recommend strengthening Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 5 to address this:

- Edit the action to read: “Develop, track, and regularly report on indicators of the health of the Mid-Atlantic regional ocean ecosystem.”³¹

²⁵ Plan at 29. Bolded language should be added to the bulleted list. Please note that this language is derived from the Framework’s Healthy Ocean Ecosystem goal (at 24 in the Plan) and the Plan’s definition of ecosystem-based management at 10.

²⁶ Plan at 32.

²⁷ Plan at 30.

²⁸ Plan at 50.

²⁹ Plan at 52. Ocean Energy Action 4, Step B states: “Place and maintain links to agency announcements about proposed offshore development activities on the Data Portal.”

³⁰ See, for example, Ehler, Charles. A Guide to Evaluating Marine Spatial Plans, Paris, UNESCO, 2014. IOC Manuals and Guides, 70; ICAM Dossier 8. Available at <http://unesdoc.unesco.org/images/0022/002277/227779e.pdf>.

³¹ Plan at 41.

- Revise Step D to “Display ocean health indicators in an online Dashboard on the Portal ~~at a web location to be determined.~~ (short-term)”³²
- Add a new step after Step E: “Advised by scientists, Traditional Knowledge holders, and stakeholders in the region, develop objectives to improve ocean health beyond the baselines noted by the selected indicators. (short-term)”
- Add a new step after Step G: “Implement adaptive management by amending objectives as needed to address issues identified by monitoring of ocean health indicators. (long-term and ongoing)”

IV. The Plan should provide robust opportunities for stakeholder and public engagement.

Public and stakeholder engagement is critical to the long-term success of the Plan. The RPB’s stated mission is to:

Implement and advance marine planning in the region by coordinating with stakeholders, scientific, business, and technical experts, and members of the public, to identify and address issues of importance to regional marine planning activities that affect the States of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, and adjacent navigable waters of the United States.³³

Local knowledge is an important source of expertise and articulating strong, clear, best practices for stakeholder consultation that broadly apply to Plan implementation, with a particular focus on improving pre-application consultation regarding newly proposed projects, will help advance the RPB’s mission.

We urge you to build beyond the engagement opportunities provided by the RPB to date³⁴ and flesh out further meaningful opportunities for stakeholders to engage in Plan decision-making and ocean permitting decisions. We recommend developing and vetting, with public feedback, a process by which to add relevant stakeholders to RPB working groups that are established to advance Plan actions. The RPB should also finalize the *Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Interim Plan for Stakeholder Engagement*³⁵ and include it as an Appendix to the Plan as a first step to honor stakeholder engagement and jumpstart additional engagement practices. Detailing stakeholder engagement to advance Sand ³² Plan at 42. A good model of this type of reporting exists in the Puget Sound Partnership, a state agency in Washington State that protects and restores the Puget Sound. Clicking on any indicator on the Partnership’s dashboard brings up a webpage that summarizes the progress being made for that indicator. Each indicator is hosted by an agency that has committed to maintaining current reporting for their assigned indicators. Additional information is available at <http://www.psp.wa.gov/vitalsigns>.

³³ Plan at 13. Emphasis added.

³⁴ Plan at 17-19.

³⁵ Draft plan available at <http://www.boem.gov/Mid-Atlantic-Regional-Planning-Body-Interim-Plan-for-Stakeholder-Engagement/>.

Management Actions 1 and 4 also could help yield Plan standards.³⁶ Science and Research Action 1 to “Identify priority applied science and research needs for the Mid-Atlantic region” in coordination with scientists, Traditional Knowledge holders, and local stakeholders will further help ensure buy-in and relevance of the RPB’s work.³⁷

Moreover, additional detail is needed as to when and how early engagement of stakeholders is conducted. The Plan states:

... agencies should discuss with the project proponent the development of a systematic process to identify and engage stakeholders who may be affected by the proposed project. The lead agency for environmental review under NEPA should also address these considerations in any relevant scoping process ... Agencies should informally discuss, with the project proponent, known stakeholders that may be affected by the proposed project. The Data Portal’s human use smart grid is one available tool to initiate this analysis. Such information does not relieve the lead agency or project applicant of their responsibility to identify potentially affected stakeholders to the extent required or anticipated under the core authorities.³⁸

Also, “Project proponents should seek to identify, engage, and incorporate information from stakeholders before filing a permit application or otherwise formally initiating the environmental review and permitting process, to ensure that stakeholder information helps inform both the project application and subsequent public, stakeholder, and agency review.”³⁹

Formalizing an early stakeholder notification approach would help result in improved information early in the review process when feedback is most valuable, as opposed to when the process is farther down the road and parties have less flexibility, but it is essential that the process be spelled out. It is also important to identify additional avenues beyond the human use smart grid for selecting interested stakeholders. For example, the environmental community should be engaged in order to advocate for marine life represented by the Portal’s other layers.

The Plan’s called-for performance monitoring and evaluation (PME) plan should include measures of public engagement and satisfaction as a component of a successful ocean plan. This idea is supported in the Plan’s Appendix 6: “Indicators that measure and evaluate Plan progress by focusing on actions related to addressing institutional coordination, stakeholder engagement and satisfaction, and the achievement of implementation Plan milestones may provide managers, stakeholders, and the public with more useful information by which to assess progress.”⁴⁰ We recommend highlighting the importance of this concept by adding language directly to Performance Monitoring and Evaluation Action 1:

³⁶ Sand Management Action 1, Step A states: “Promote strategic stakeholder engagement with Federal, State, Tribal, and local partners to improve coastal planning and information sharing, implement effective and sustainable resource management strategies for OCS sand, and facilitate efficient processes to best serve the public’s short- and long-term coastal resilience needs. (short-term and ongoing)” (at 62) and Action 4, Step A, aimed at improving regional sand management, states “Identify new and improve existing stakeholder relationships regarding coordination around beach nourishment and coastal restoration projects that utilize OCS sand resources. This effort is intended to improve efficiencies during project planning and analysis, including NEPA and associated regulatory consultations.”(at 65). Please note that our organizations support these actions, as well as Sand Management Action 2 to “Develop a comprehensive inventory of sand resources to support planned and future restoration and resilience projects, provide availability for emergency use, and manage competing use challenges.” (at 63).

... the RPB will develop and implement a PME plan by which the RPB, stakeholders, and the public can determine whether and how effectively the Plan actions implemented by the RPB are achieving the Framework goals and objectives. The PME plan would identify: • Actions and objectives to be addressed. • Applicable performance indicators – including those related to public and stakeholder engagement – and associated baseline conditions.⁴¹

As part of the PME plan, the RPB should create a specific mechanism that allows stakeholders to petition the RPB to take up specific ocean management issues as they arise. As the RPB and ocean users learn lessons through Plan implementation and new issues and ocean uses arise, having a specific mechanism for stakeholders to formally request that the RPB address a management issue would enhance Plan performance and improve future Plan iterations. A general framework for such an option could include: 1) a stakeholder submitting a formal comment to the RPB; 2) RPB Co-Leads deciding whether or not to take up the issue; and, 3) if the issue is prioritized for discussion, an RPB forum is held to discuss improvements to the Plan with federal agencies, states, tribes and stakeholders.

We also urge the RPB to hold public meetings at least twice a year⁴² – as is the current process – to ensure more opportunities for interaction with the public and stakeholders.⁴³

We urge the RPB to share the revised Plan with the public prior to it being sent to the NOC for concurrence. Ideally, this would occur at a public meeting, but, at the least, it should entail a public webinar where RPB members explain changes made to the draft Plan as a result of public comments and allows for public feedback at the end of the RPB presentation. This kind of open dialogue will result in greater stakeholder and public support, as it makes clear the impacts that individuals’ time and efforts have made and allows for a greater understanding of the reasoning behind decisions.

V. The Plan’s performance monitoring and evaluation plan should be detailed and developed as soon as possible.

The Plan’s PME plan, with explicit actions and deadlines, should be completed by the spring of 2017. For each Plan action step, the PME plan should identify a date for its accomplishment. Action steps must be more definitive than short- or long-term, with dates and prioritization for completion. We recommend ⁴⁰ Plan at 129.

⁴¹ Plan at 99.

⁴² Plan at 95 calls for meeting “at least once per year.”

⁴³ Please note that the annual meetings noted in Commercial and Recreational Fishing Action 1, Step A, “Convene annual meetings between regional NOAA and FWS leadership, MAFMC leadership, and State marine fisheries directors to identify shared interests and build collaboration. (short-term and ongoing)” (at 55) should also be open to the public to allow for greater transparency and improved understanding.

revising Performance Monitoring and Evaluation Action 1: “Develop Plan performance monitoring and evaluation plan by the spring of 2017.”⁴⁴

VI. The final Plan should retain actions to advance ecosystem health and build on efforts to identify and protect key recreational areas.

Beyond what is noted above, our organizations support: Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Actions to document the shifts in ocean species and habitats that will result from ocean warming;⁴⁵ address the problem of marine debris;⁴⁶ and better incorporate the Traditional Knowledge of tribes’ ocean health into decision-making.⁴⁷ We support Healthy Ocean Ecosystem Action 3 to advance a Mid-Atlantic ocean acidification monitoring network, and recommend revising its Step D to “Facilitate the development and launch of the Monitoring Network and publicly post results and data analysis of status and trends. (short-term).”⁴⁸

We also strongly support Non-Consumptive Recreation Action 1 to “Identify, characterize, and share information about measures to maintain the recreational value of important non-consumptive recreational areas and the activities they sustain” and recommend clarifying its Step B to improve our understanding of potential non-consumptive use/ industrial use conflicts: “Identify and assess potential impacts and use conflicts to high-value non-consumptive recreational use uses from other human uses, as well as areas and potential impacts and conflicts between non-consumptive recreational uses activities and marine and coastal wildlife. (short-term and ongoing).”⁴⁹

VII. The final Plan should support and seek to build on the Portal.

The Portal is at the foundation of the Plan’s ultimate success. It serves as an online repository for the regional information and data spread throughout federal, state and tribal governments and has been updated with new data on marine life and human use. It serves as a central online hub for regional planning data sharing and increases agency collaboration and stakeholder inclusion. As such, we value the Plan’s Data Portal Actions to sustain the Portal’s operation and maintenance; fund development of and integrate new data and updated data layers into the Portal; and to conduct agency outreach to fill in stakeholder layers.⁵⁰ To advance the Data Portal, we recommend:

- Adding a step to Data Portal Action 3⁵¹ to “Commit all federal agencies to post proposed ocean projects’ shapefiles on the Portal during comment periods so that stakeholders and the public

- Committing to complete the Data Portal operations and maintenance plan called for in Data Portal Action 1 by the end of 2016 so that funding and collaboration commitments are solidified and can advise agencies’ upcoming appropriations asks.⁵²
- Incorporating the following language into the Plan: “RPB member agencies believe that the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal is fundamental to the successful implementation of the regional ocean plan and will contribute to the agencies’ ability to satisfy their missions and statutory mandates. Accordingly, the RPB member agencies commit to working together to provide the financial, staff and/or other resources necessary to ensure the ongoing maintenance and update of the Portal.”

Conclusion

Executive Order 13547 defines “coastal and marine spatial planning” or regional ocean planning as a:

... comprehensive, adaptive, integrated, ecosystem-based, and transparent spatial planning process, based on sound science, for analyzing current and anticipated uses of ocean ... areas ... [Regional planning] identifies areas most suitable for various types or classes of activities in order to reduce conflicts among uses, reduce environmental impacts, facilitate compatible uses, and preserve critical ecosystem services to meet economic, environmental, security, and social objectives. In practical terms, ... [regional planning] provides a public policy process for society to better determine how the ocean ... [is] sustainably used and protected – now and for future generations.⁵³

We appreciate all of the time and effort you have committed to designing such a process and the opportunity to share these recommendations on the region’s first ocean action plan. We look forward to continuing to work with you to implement the Plan and improve management of our valuable marine life and ocean environment.

RE: Results of Regional Survey on Mid-Atlantic Ocean Planning

DATE: July 27, 2016

The bipartisan research team of Fairbank, Maslin, Maullin, Metz & Associates and Public Opinion Strategies recently completed 1,101 telephone interviews with residents of the Mid-Atlantic states to assess their views on major issues impacting the ocean.¹ Overall, the survey found that Mid-Atlantic residents overwhelmingly support improved planning and coordination for the future of the Atlantic Ocean, and want to see environmental conservation emerge as a top priority in a final coordinated regional ocean plan. Protecting the health of marine environment by identifying and conserving areas offshore that are important for fish and sea life – which will help support the communities that rely on these resources – in the final plan is a key priority of respondents.

Respondents see the ocean as important to their quality of life, and strongly value it for the home it provides fish and wildlife. While three-quarters describe it as important for future generations, few feel it is currently well-managed. In addition, there is an increasing perception that the overall health of the ocean has declined in the last ten years. Close to 80 percent support the implementation of regional ocean planning – seeing it as an effective way to encourage coordination, ocean health, and sustainable ocean development; this is consistent with findings from 2013. Among the key specific findings of the survey were the following:

- Sixty percent of respondents see their state’s ocean as extremely or very important to their quality of life. As shown in Figure 1, three in five (60%) across the region rate the ocean as “extremely” or “very important” to their quality of life. This is a significant increase over the same perception measured in 2013, when just over half (52%) said the ocean was “extremely” or “very important” to their quality of life.

- They are much more likely to think things have been getting worse than they are to think things have been improving. Respondents were asked whether overall ocean health in their states had gotten better or worse in the past ten years and, as shown in Figure 2 below, a plurality says it has gotten worse. Notably, respondents were nearly split in their assessment of the trend in ocean health in 2013, with 35 percent judging it better and 37 saying it has gotten worse. Now, however, those who feel the ocean’s health has gotten worse outnumber the share who feel it has gotten better nearly two to one.

- Mid-Atlantic residents overwhelmingly see the ocean as important for future generations – but also as vulnerable, and not well-managed. As in 2013, respondents were offered a series of words and phrases and asked to indicate how well each describes the ocean in their state (with the top responses detailed in Figure 3). The responses show that they see a diverse range of values – it is seen as crucial to their state’s economy, wildlife and future generations. Many also see the ocean as “busy,” and more than one-third (34%) do not believe the ocean is “well-managed” – both indicating the increasing urgency of coordinated planning.

(On a Scale Seven-Point Scale Where “7” Equals “Describes the Ocean Very Well” and “1” Equals “Does Not Describe the Ocean Well at All”)

- They see fish and wildlife habitat as a top benefit the ocean provides to their state. Presented with a list of the diverse benefits the ocean provides, Mid-Atlantic residents ranked providing a place for fish and wildlife to live the top benefit – by a wide margin. The proportion rating habitat “extremely” or “very important” was 18 points higher than for any other ocean benefit tested. It is followed by recreational uses, then by providing a place for children to learn about nature and providing fresh seafood, both of which respondents regard as slightly more important since 2013. The benefits viewed as “extremely” or “very important” by more than seven in ten respondents are displayed in Figure 4 on the next page.

FIGURE 4: Importance of Ocean Benefits to Mid-Atlantic Residents

Benefit	Extremely/Very Important
	2013	2016
Providing a place for fish and wildlife to live	91%	93%
Providing a place for recreation like surfing, fishing, swimming, walking on the beach, biking or viewing birds and other wildlife	76%	75%
Providing a place for children to learn about nature	69%	72%
Providing fresh seafood	68%	72%

- Nearly four in five support development of a Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan. Respondents were read a brief description of a regional ocean action plan, as detailed below. After hearing this description, more than two in five (41%) indicated that they “strongly” support the approach, with 79 percent overall offering support (as shown in Figure 5).

Our ocean is home to a wide array of marine life and contributes billions to the economy. But our ocean is increasingly busy with wind development, demand for offshore sand mining to rebuild beaches, and massive new cargo ships as a result of the Panama Canal expansion. Dozens of state and federal government agencies have overlapping and sometimes conflicting responsibilities for ocean management and little coordination. That is now changing. Coastal states including Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, together with federal agencies, fisheries managers, and Native American tribes have developed an action plan to guide ocean decisions. Do you support or oppose development of this action plan for the Mid-Atlantic Ocean?

Support for the approach is strong across nearly every major subgroup in the region, including:

- ✓ 84 percent of Democrats, 77 percent of Republicans, and 76 percent of Independents;
- ✓ 78 percent of white residents and 87 percent of residents of color;
- ✓ 72 percent or more at all income levels;
- ✓ 76 percent of men and 82 percent of women;
- ✓ 80 percent of those under 50 and 79 percent of those 50 and older; and
- ✓ Over 75 percent of respondents in each of the six states.

After a brief exchange of statements from supporters and opponents of the action plan, respondents continued to support it more than 6 to 1, with 79 percent in support and just 12 percent opposed.

- Several aspects of Mid-Atlantic regional ocean planning are broadly popular. Respondents were read a list of different specific aspects of the ocean planning process, and asked whether they supported or opposed each aspect. As shown in Figure 6 below, at least 85 percent support each aspect tested.

Aspect	Strongly Support	Somewhat Support	Total Support	Total Oppose
Identifying areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life	71%	25%	96%	3%
Committing agencies to conserve ocean areas important for fish and sea life	66%	27%	93%	5%
Setting objectives for ocean health and indicators to regularly measure progress in meeting those objectives	59%	32%	90%	6%

- Mid-Atlantic residents rate protecting the health of the ocean environment as a clear top priority for regional ocean planning. Survey respondents were asked to select a first and second priority for regional ocean planning from among three choices: environmental protection, protection of industries and jobs, and recreational uses. As shown in Figure 7 on the next page, close to two-thirds (64%) choose protection of the environment as a first priority, and four in five (80%) choose it as either a first or second priority.

Taken together, these survey results show that Mid-Atlantic residents place a high value on the ocean's contribution to their quality of life and economy; recognize that it is vulnerable in the face of increasing demands placed upon it by multiple users; and strongly support a regional ocean planning process that will help to secure its long-term health.

Thank you for submitting comments on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan; we will post them on our website. The MidA RPB will consider all public comments in revising the Draft Plan, and will submit a final Plan to the National Ocean Council for its concurrence this fall. Please check our website <http://www.boem.gov/Ocean-Action-Plan/> for additional information.

RE: 9,386 Individuals Express Strong Support for the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan Action

To the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body,

We thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan. As members of the ocean conservation community, we commend the effort the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body (RPB) has taken to produce this plan. The recently released draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Plan is a pioneering effort in ocean management, and we are proud of the continued leadership the states and region have displayed. The plan has many elements that will prove beneficial to states, federal agencies, tribes, the Mid-Atlantic Fishery Management Council, and ocean users in the Mid-Atlantic including individuals like us, who aim to ensure a healthy ocean ecosystem is properly balanced with a strong ocean economy. We are pleased to submit these comments expressing our strong support for the Ocean Action Plan, which we believe is a solid first step towards comprehensive, ecosystem-based management of our coastal and marine resources.

First, we find great importance in maintaining the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal. We applaud the efforts the Data Portal team took to develop a regional, comprehensive and interactive database that visualizes ocean uses and ecosystems, in conjunction with the plan. It serves as a critical guidepost for future decision-making and ensures potential impacts to important marine life are considered and addressed in the decision-making process. Through the plan's narrative and map-based descriptions, we have, for the first time, a concerted and detailed effort to more fully portray the diversity and abundance of the Mid-Atlantic ocean ecosystem in a way that managers can easily access and consider.

Further, the efforts the Marine Data and Analysis Team (MDAT) is undertaking to characterize marine life species through peer review is truly revolutionary and will provide a strong foundation for future efforts to characterize the marine ecosystem of the region.

However, the ability to maintain and update the data portal, and all the critical information it provides, is vital to the long-term success of the ocean plan. We strongly urge the RPB to work with their existing agencies to identify sustainable funding mechanisms and leadership solutions that will ensure the portal remains a keystone of ocean decision-making for the Mid-Atlantic long into the future.

Second, we are pleased to see that the RPB has taken strides to develop a framework for identifying ecologically rich areas (ERAs). As one of many themes throughout the plan, it is clear that the RPB has taken considerable effort to ensure the ecosystem is incorporated in to decision-making processes, and for that, we applaud your efforts. We are happy that you are working towards identifying areas of high biodiversity, productivity, abundance, as well as areas with vulnerable and rare resources in the region. As noted in the plan, the RPB is working closely with the Northeast Regional Planning Body, and we strongly urge the RPB to maintain consistency with the Northeast RPB's efforts in identifying areas significant for ecosystem structure and function.

Further, we encourage the RPB to identify a more concrete work plan and timeline for finalizing the ERA framework as well as clarity on how ERAs will be used in management decisions for ocean users across the region, as the language currently in the Plan is extremely vague. As articulated in the Draft Framework, the process of identifying ERAs should be done in an open, inclusive, and transparent manner driven by the best available data and leadership from the scientific community. As with other products produced from the MDAT team, we strongly encourage the entire ERA process to be available for public review, and for data to undergo a rigorous peer-review process from the scientific community.

Third, while the RPB and ocean plan provide a better mechanism for stakeholder engagement than before this process began, we strongly urge the RPB to continue to strengthen stakeholder engagement by developing specific mechanisms where stakeholders can be involved early in the decision-making process. It is our belief that transparent discussions about stakeholder needs and the needs of the marine environment make for better long-term management decisions. The stakeholder engagement and consideration of marine ecosystems outlined in the ocean plan are a major step in the right direction, and must continue. Early stakeholder engagement is critical to ensuring a healthy and sustainable ocean ecosystem is maintained, and our resources remain viable for future generations to enjoy.

We commend the RPB and member agencies on their commitments to enhance agency actions by improving coordination, using data and information from the portal, leveraging resources, and identifying research needs. We urge the RPB to further outline how you will ensure agencies uphold their commitments, especially where it comes to improving communication and utilizing the data portal. With these commitments, we fully expect that coordination among agencies, with stakeholders, and with states and tribes are adhered to, and best practices are maximized to the fullest extent possible.

Ocean Conservancy has worked extensively on ocean acidification and marine debris including collecting over 30-years of data on ocean debris around the globe. We look forward to working with you to help advance both these priorities. We are interested in advancing knowledge on ocean ecosystems to ensure they remain healthy and to better understand changes that ecosystems are undergoing in the face of climate change. We fully support your work to advance an Ocean Acidification Monitoring Network and reduce the volume of marine debris in the waterways of the region. We applaud the RPB for including these priorities as prominent goals for the planning process long-term, and look forward to continuing to work with the RPB to ensure both efforts produce the best results possible. We urge the RPB to delineate timelines for major project goals, and ensure the public and scientific communities are involved every step of the way.

While identifying the need for an Ocean Acidification Monitoring Network and marine debris reduction strategy is welcome, we urge the RPB to identify a regional research and science agenda for our ocean. In the Northeast, a clear list of priorities were identified that lay out where data gaps exist and efforts the RPB will take to facilitate filling those gaps. We urge the Mid-Atlantic to pursue a similar endeavor, to facilitate the expansion of knowledge of our ocean and the people who use it.

We thank the RPB again for this opportunity to comment on the Mid-Atlantic Plan. This is a strong first step towards comprehensive management of our ocean and we look forward to working with you in the future to ensure both our ocean's health and economy are advanced in a smart, stakeholder and data-driven manner.

To: "Chase, Alison" <achase@nrdc.org>

Thank you for submitting comments on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan; we will post them on our website. The MidA RPB will consider all public comments in revising the Draft Plan, and will submit a final Plan to the National Ocean Council for its concurrence this fall. Please check our website <http://www.boem.gov/Ocean-Action-Plan/> for additional information.

Dear Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members:

The draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan is a significant achievement in ocean management that can strengthen interagency coordination in ocean decisions. But it must commit agencies to conserve ecologically rich areas and places of high marine biodiversity.

The final plan needs to set a short, definitive deadline – ideally by the end of this year – to identify areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life. These ecologically rich areas should be made public on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal so managers, businesses and other stakeholders can use the information to make better development decisions.

New and expanding ocean use puts more pressure on our marine life, already stressed from pollution, degradation of ocean habitats, warmer temperatures and ocean acidification. Agencies should commit to use their existing authorities to conserve, to the fullest extent consistent with applicable law, areas important for the health of the ocean environment so that we can ensure the jobs, food and recreation that depend on it.

Thank you for your continued work to conserve our ocean's health.

Sincerely,

Carlos	Quiroga Lassepas	Austin	TX	US	2016-08-10	There is much more than just development; PRESERVATION & Recovery.
Felicia	Miller	Long Beach	CA	US	2016-08-10	The whole planet needs to be protected and that includes all its waterways.
Carol	Jurczewski	Riverside	IL	US	2016-08-10	It is imperative our oceans be protected that will benefit people and the species that live in them!
Sandra	Woodall	San Antonio	TX	US	2016-08-10	If we don't protect the life in our oceans, we may lose it. If we don't protect the water, we will bathe our shores in poison. PEOPLE ARE GETTING SICK, SEA LEVELS ARE RISING, OCEANS ARE FULL OF PLASTIC.... AND IT'S ALL BECAUSE OF IRRESPONSIBLE, STUPID, SELFISH, GREEDY HUMANS!!!!!!!! Mankind has been charged with the responsibility to care for, and protect the planet we all live on, and all the animals which share this planet with us. This is very important to me, because I want life on Earth to continue...don't you??? The line needs to be drawn in the forests, the jungles, the oceans, the lakes, the rivers, the mountains, and all the animals that live there... NOW!!!! Trees supply most of our oxygen and sequesters carbon and detoxifies the air, Got it?? It's our global responsibility to stop the extinction of animals, and to stop the destruction of the environment. People, open your eyes!!! The environment is our home!! Let your future kids witness the beauty of our planet!! We endanger one species, we endanger all others... including ourselves!! It should be pretty obvious by now, that WE need to act NOW!!!! With everything that's going on in this world, please... WAKE UP!!!!!! The Earth is dying all around us... Please, open your eyes!!!! Look around you!!! Wars are starting, animals are becoming extinct, the weather is getting worse, the ice is melting... must I go on?! EVERYONE is hurting because of all the damages we are doing to the whole planet!! We really need to open our eyes and stop destroying the environment/wildlife, and start caring... The evidence is all around you... in your school, the news, and all over the Internet!!!! Please, open your eyes to the horrors of reality, and help us save Earth and all it's inhabitants... Why do humans want to destroy the beauty of this planet, and the beauty of animals that share it with them?? Our real goal as human beings, is to protect our wildlife and the Earth, NOT destroy them!!!! What gives humans the right to kill most of God's creatures, and destroy their natural habitat in the first place???? We have to live in harmony with them, not destroy them!!!! This is not humane nor is it right for us to take what doesn't belong to us!! Humans are not the only creatures on this planet that have feelings, nor are they the only creatures with the right to exist on this planet!!!! I will sign any petition to save these animals and their natural habitats!!!! You know, this is exactly why a majority of people who oppose this destruction, really hate your guts, because you can't do anything right by us, or our wildlife, and we need wildlife for our own survival!!!! Do you idiots realize what would happen if there were no animals, no oceans, no lakes no rivers no mountains, no jungles and no forests???? We will regret it once everything on this planet is destroyed, because once the entire ecosystem is gone, the human race won't survive!!!! Those uncivilized people don't have a place in a civilized world, since they are the main cause of this destruction in the first place!!!! The animals were here long before most of the human race, I think they deserve to live in the wild just as Nature intended!!!!!! The main problem is, the human race is taking taking up more space, so the animals have no place else to go, and when a human/animal encounter occurs, it's not the fault of the animals, but humans think they can just pin the blame where it doesn't belong, and then kill them!!!! Animals shouldn't have to pay the price for human stupidity, and what used to belong to the animals, has been taken from them by selfish humans!!!!!! Humans need to learn more about the other species on God's earth, we're not the only animals that can survive on it, and we won't have much time left to live once all other species are gone!!!!!! Please, let them be, they all have a right to live too!!!! Humanity's true purpose in life, is to care for the planet, and all the creatures that live on it!! We don't have the right to take what doesn't even belong to us, be it the life of another living creature, or the land that rightfully belonged to them!!!! Humans are supposed to be very intelligent, and fully evolved creatures, but the fact that they kill, destroy, abuse, pollute, and exploit natural resources without thought, only makes the human race the exact opposite of what they were supposed Virginia has amazing beaches. Please keep them as they are. Future generations will thank us for our continued oversite. Severe weather and rising oceans are part of global warming which will make conservation more difficult, yet mankind needs to preserve diversity of species. Its important for the environment to keep it healthy. As well as the sea life that lives in it. I do know that in our area horseshoe crabs are in a big decline. I do know that commercial and personl boaters catch them and use them for bait.we will know their purpose when they become extinct. We need more environmental protections for the 'BioGem' historic SE TN, N GA areas such as those in and around Apison, E. Brainerd, E. Hamilton, Summit, Collegedale, Harrison Bay State park area and into Ooltewah,McDonald, Lebanon, Flint Springs, Blue Springs, Black Fox, Oak grove, Flint Springs, and into Red Clay State Historic park area, and into areas such as Cohutta, Cherokee Valley Ga and areas around these. These areas have a underground, underwater (miles big) cave and/or sinkhole through which much waters flow into waters such as the Coosa, Tallapoosa, Conasauga, and eventually into the Mighty Mississippi river and its delta. These areas need to be kept as free from development, more or larger roads, and more ex/sub/urbanization as possible. These areas do not need more (big businesses), franchises, transportation related developments, industry, commercial and/or unclean energy (transmission) developments, housing developments or 'clusters', or expansions. These areas need more protections from the (non-TVA, Non-State or Local) National Park Service, National Forest Service, marine and/or ruralheritage conservationists, EPA/DOI, UNESCO to help protect and preserve these areas. We need many more New DEAL democrat alliance leaders placed in office on all levels of state/local/Federal governments to help in areas needed,not force us to 'regress' but to help us go forward in needed areas.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs). The Plan should also articulate agency commitments to ensure that ocean management decisions conserve the ecosystem values and functions that ERAs contain.
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Mitchell Dormont

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comment on the Draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan. The Port of Virginia recognizes the substantial commitment and effort involved in the creation of this document. We also that believe that with maturity, the tools could provide valuable information to all parties who rely on the Mid-Atlantic coastal waters for their livelihood and recreation. We do have some concerns that, while MARCO is not a regulatory body, there could be the opportunity for regulatory agencies to use the information in this document in a manner which could increase the level of scrutiny on the current uses of the Mid-Atlantic coastal waters including an increase in regulatory oversight. Specific comments:

- Section 2.4.5 (page 58) references the Port of Hampton Roads, Virginia rather than The Port of Virginia. In 2014, the Virginia Port Authority and its private operating subsidiary Virginia International Terminals, LLC created and began operating under a single marketing brand: The Port of Virginia. Accordingly, the US Army Corps of Engineers has agreed to consolidate its reporting through the Waterborne Commerce Statistics Center beginning with its 2015 data under a single Port of Virginia listing. We would ask that you similarly update all references in the document to "The Port of Virginia."

- Appendix 3 (starting on page 114) does not include the Water Resources Development Act among its list of key federal laws. Understanding that the draft plan is not meant to be all inclusive, this legislation is noteworthy and impactful on the Mid-Atlantic coastal waters and potentially worthy of inclusion.

Thank you for allowing us to comment.

August 29, 2016

Dear Mr. Greenfield:

Thank you for your letter of August 19, 2016, Request for Suspension and Extension of Comment Period. After carefully considering your comments and request, we have decided not to suspend or extend the public comment period for the draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan (Plan). There are two main reasons for this decision.

First, the substance of the Federal agency actions, goals, and commitments is provided in detail in the draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan itself, particularly in Chapter 2. The draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan does not augment or subtract from any entity's existing statutory or other authorities, but rather provides improved information and mechanisms for application under these existing laws and authorities.

Additionally, the July 6, 2016, Federal Register Notice (81 FR 44040) announcing the availability of the draft Plan, states that "each Federal MidA RPB member will incorporate the final Plan into their planning processes and internal agency documents, and use the Plan to guide and inform their decisions and actions, consistent with applicable law. Federal MidA RPB members with regulatory responsibilities will incorporate the final Plan into their pre-planning, planning, and permitting to guide and inform Federal agency internal and external permitting decisions, environmental compliance, resource management plans, and other actions taken pursuant to existing statutory and regulatory authorities. These agencies will ensure their scientists, managers, decision-makers, and analysts use the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan to guide and inform their actions to the fullest extent possible under existing statutory and regulatory authorities." The two important points communicated to the public include: 1) the Plan will guide Federal agency decision-making; and 2) all Federal agency decision making will be consistent with existing applicable laws. The remaining details of the various administrative mechanisms the Federal agencies will use to guide and inform their implementation of the Plan would not change or add to the public's understanding of the Federal agency use of the Plan. Thus, the public had sufficient information to provide detailed and informed comments on the draft Plan at the time it was issued.

Second, the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal ("Portal") does not need to "contain the full suite of marine life and habitat mapping products" in order for the public to provide informed comments. As an initial matter, the Portal is only one aspect of the draft Plan. Moreover, the draft Plan in Chapter 3 describes in detail the nature of the data that the Portal will ultimately include. Finally, we do not anticipate that the Portal will be fully populated until sometime in the future. It would be impossible to wait until that occurs and still solicit timely comments on the draft Plan.

Because it is our view that the public has all of the information necessary to make meaningful comments and develop informed views of the draft Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan, we decline the request of the National Ocean Policy Coalition to suspend or extend the comment period on the draft Plan.

We appreciate the consistent and valuable participation of the National Ocean Policy Coalition in the public meetings and activities of the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body, along with the comments you have provided.

Sincerely,

Robert LaBelle

Dear Mr. LaBelle:

Please take a moment to consider my support of a conservation-driven plan from someone who grew up going to New Jersey beaches and enjoying all they have to offer.

In New Jersey, our coastline is one of our most valued environmental treasures and economic engines. For those reasons, we write to you today in support of a strong, conservation driven Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan (OAP).

Environmental Commissions in New Jersey advise our local governments and act as watchdogs for environmental problems and opportunities. We inform elected officials and the public, serve on committees, research issues, develop educational programs and advocate for sound environmental policies. We work on many issues, including open space preservation, smart growth, wetlands and water resource protection, green infrastructure, recycling and litter, environmental cleanups, wildlife habitat, energy efficiency and conservation and transportation.

Our ocean is a busy place. There are offshore wind development proposals throughout the region; our ports are likely to become busier with larger shipping vessels; offshore sand mining for storm mitigation and beach restoration risks impacting our valuable fisheries habitats; and increased communications and technology demand updated or new cable routes.

With all of these uses taking place, careful planning for healthy ocean ecosystems must be at the forefront. Healthy oceans are important to us and the communities that we serve:

- In New Jersey, a healthy ocean is imperative for our $3.2 billion dollar tourism and recreation economy, which contributed 40.5% to the state's ocean GDP[1]
- The direct ocean economy generates $8 billion dollars of the state's GDP and sustains over 122,000 jobs[2];
- The ocean produces over one half of the oxygen we breathe[3];

- Our Mid-Atlantic ocean contributes $47 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs^[4]; and
- Tourism and recreation accounts for 72% of the ocean economy's employment and 28% of its GDP.^[5]

The Final Ocean Action Plan must ensure a healthy ocean, today and in the future. It is critical that the final plan include:

- A robust and effective process for getting everyone involved in implementing the Plan. Right now the Draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- A short, definitive deadline to identify offshore areas that are important for the health of marine life, also known as ecologically rich areas or ERAs. The Plan must also articulate agency commitments to protect the region's ERAs.
- Strengthened Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that many actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have either a lead federal agency or the entire RPB assigned to oversee implementation.

On behalf of our municipal officials and community individuals we thank you for the opportunity to comment on the draft Mid-Atlantic Ocean Action Plan.

With continued and meaningful engagement, stakeholder input, and sound science-based conservation decisions we can all work together to protect and enjoy our ocean for generations to come while planning for and allowing sustainable uses.

Sincerely,

Christine Koehler

- * A way for everyone involved to put the plan into action;
- * A deadline - in the very near future - to identify ocean areas that are important for marine life and commitments to protect those places; and
- * Solid commitments from Federal agencies to work together through the plan as they make decisions that affect the ocean and coast.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! I applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years. This is truly a huge step forward in managing our ocean resources in a sustainable manner.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future. Specific measures are quantifiable and measurable so that the success or failure of the plan can be more easily measured in the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Do it for the money. If the oceans and coastlines suffer, so do the people who live there and make their livelihood from that environment. For example, I surf, which means every trip to the beach I'm stopping to get gas nearby, visiting the local surf shop for items, getting lunch at restaurants in the area. If we allow the coastlines and ocean quality degrade, many thousands of surfers like me who patronize local business will stop spending our dollars there. These legal protections preserve the harmony between land and sea.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

Let's make sure all the hard work of the past several years is not wasted.

You must use all the knowledge that you've accumulated to identify where the most productive areas of the ocean are located so we can intelligently source where to locate wind farms and other similar projects.

The whole purpose of this hard work is ensure we create a plan for what our oceans should look like and have it be free of contaminants, pollution and other hazards.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Members of the Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Well done by completing the first comprehensive draft plan for our Mid-Atlantic oceans. As a permanent resident of the NJ shore, I appreciate your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like me as you shaped the this plan over the last several years.

However, all that hard work is for naught if the final plan lacks specifics or doesn't change how our oceans are managed, We MUST keep them healthy and functioning well into the future.

I beg you to use all of the data now available to you. You must delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms or oil drilling rigs?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity for future planning and protection of our resources. It is our opportunity to decide what we want our oceans to look like. So, please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

I'm writing to express my gratitude, that someone is stepping up and taking action that will help save our oceans. Also to send a congrats on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! Myself, the rest of the surf community, and essentially anyone who has involvement with the beach and the ocean, sincerely appreciation all you're doing to try and secure a health future for our coastline and ocean.

However, if the plan is not specific enough, or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future, then we are still at risk, along with all the sea-life the ocean supports.

I'm writing to ask the committee to use ALL data now available, and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms, or tidal energy operations?

This whole process is exciting for us, and also extremely important to our future, as you all know. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that helps get us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean. Again, thank you for taking action with us, and we look forward to the plan!!

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

chu rob

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

I have lived within a mile of the ocean all of the 60+ years of my life. The older I get, the more I appreciate how lucky I am to have an ocean in my back yard. I feel sorry for any one that does not live on a coast and does not have the opportunities I do to visit the beach anytime/ any season I want. Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Florence Morris

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Thank you for completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic. We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years. I urge you to ban offshore oil and gas exploration and development in the Mid-Atlantic planning area, do everything in your power to reduce underwater noise pollution in the ocean from ships and military activity, and continue to prioritize and move forward with offshore wind development.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Peter Schofield

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

I'm writing to express my gratitude, that someone is stepping up and taking action that will help save our oceans. Also to send a congrats on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! Myself, the rest of the surf community, and essentially anyone who has involvement with the beach and the ocean, sincerely appreciation all you're doing to try and secure a health future for our coastline and ocean.

However, if the plan is not specific enough, or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future, then we are still at risk, along with all the sea-life the ocean supports.

I'm writing to ask the committee to use ALL data now available, and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms, or tidal energy operations?

This whole process is exciting for us, and also extremely important to our future, as you all know. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that helps get us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean. Again, thank you for taking action with us, and we look forward to the plan!!

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Ed Jocz

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Thank you for efforts toward ocean planning.

I encourage you to include specific changes to improve the likelihood of healthy and functioning oceans into the future. For example, what is the correlation between regional characteristics and productivity of those regions.

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Francisco J. Velez

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members,

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our Mid-Atlantic oceans! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the past several years.

However, it's all for nothing if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning for future generations.

Please use all of the data now available to you to determine where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. With that information, you can determine which options would most effectively help preserve and protect our oceans.

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Hey! Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

Unfortunately from what I understand it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

If you could Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Deepest regards and Thank you -Chris

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,

Andrew Gilman

Dear Robert LaBelle,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body Members--

Congratulations on completing a draft of the first comprehensive plan for our oceans in the Mid-Atlantic! We applaud your hard work and commitment to listening to stakeholders like myself in shaping this plan over the last three years.

But it is precisely all of that hard work that is at risk if the final plan is not specific enough or doesn't significantly change how our oceans are managed to keep them healthy and functioning into the future.

Please use all of the data now available to you and delineate where the most productive areas of the ocean are located. Without that information how will we know where to place future projects like offshore wind farms?

The ocean planning process represents a rare opportunity to look into the future and decide what we want our ocean to look like. Please create a final ocean plan for the Mid-Atlantic that gets us to your vision of a healthy, clean, thriving ocean.

Thank you

Sincerely,

Mid-Atlantic Regional Planning Body

Dear Regional Planning Body,

The Mid-Atlantic's ocean and bays are beautiful places for families to visit, swim, and fish. Our region's ocean is also an economic powerhouse, contributing more than $48 billion to the region's gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly 700,000 jobs. And offshore waters serve as migratory corridors and a home for ocean life, including endangered North Atlantic right whales, sea turtles, and many fish species.

As our ocean faces growing challenges of pollution, loss of habitat, and competing industrial uses, it's critical the Mid-Atlantic Regional Ocean Action Plan ensure a healthy ocean today and in the future. I applaud the RPB on its work to complete this first-ever draft Ocean Action Plan. I hope you will incorporate these recommendations below that will make this Plan stronger and more reflective of me, as an ocean user and coastal citizen.

The Final Ocean Action Plan must:

- Develop a robust and effective process for engaging stakeholders in Plan implementation. Right now the draft Plan's public involvement strategies are vague and variable. Stakeholders, project proponents and agencies will all benefit through a consistent, uniform engagement strategy.
- Set a short, definitive deadline - ideally by the end of this year - to identify and post on the Mid-Atlantic Ocean Data Portal areas offshore that are important for the health of marine life (ecologically rich areas or ERAs).
- Strengthen Federal agency commitments to the Plan's tools for coordinating agency decisions. It is unacceptable that even a few actions outlined in the draft Plan do not have a lead federal agency or tasks the entire RPB with overseeing implementation.

With these additions to the Plan, I know our region will take a big step forward toward a healthier Atlantic Ocean.

Sincerely,
